Except for her bitch of a mother. And the man who makes her insides twist. Bent on embarrassing his father, Worthington LaViere, III uses his position as a highly respected psychologist to delve into the secrets he wants to explore. Especially the old money of the Bluegrass set. And Auggie. The green-eyed temptress hes unable to strike from his thoughts. Auggie and Worth. Pure and corrupt. Love and hate. Its the beginning of a dynasty built on a legacy of greed, selfishness, and pure wickedness. Just remember, anything built on a foundation of lies can topple at any moment. Bluegrass Obsession: Although a handsome and respected psychologist, Worth is unable to free himself from the curse of his fathers past. Nor can his beautiful wife, Auggie. Her mothers deceit spawned the devil incarnate. A brother who rises from the depths of hell to haunt them with hatred and retribution. Evil and manipulative, Linc doesnt care who he hurts to get what he wants and must be stopped before he goes too far. Can Worth and Auggie fight him and rise above it all, finding salvation in each other? More importantly, can they protect their family from the legacy of inherited evil? Bluegrass Rebellion: The LaViere men wealthy, controlling, self-centered and willful. Although generations separated them, they retained their legacies of power. Magnetic and perpetually driven to excel, their appetites for dominance over their women was unrelenting. While their wealth set them apart, the cost of those they destroyed was greater than any fortune imaginable. Auggie, the copper-haired beauty who mentally jostled with her handsome Worth paid her price and yet asked for more. Liane, the sensitive creature with intuitive empathy sought to conquer her Hawk and paid her price as well yet neither of them could deny themselves their men. A saga of generations where wealth was measured by the foes they conquered. Psychological swordplay left only a few standing. Who would they be?
